Consul Livingston.

Fired on City and Killed

Several Persons.

At the urgent request of Mr. L. W.

Livingston, the United States consul at Cape Haytien, Haiti, the Navy Department yesterday sent telegraphic instructions to the commander of the gunboat

Marietta to proceed to that place, where severe fighting took place Saturday and Sunday betwen the rival revolutionary forces, which endangered foreign interests. The Marietta is at San Juan, P.

R., where she has been held in the expectation that she would be needed to protect American interests on the Orinoco River, in Venezuela. It was decided, however, in view of Consul Liv

Senator Spooner, Who Prevented Pos-Choked Mr. Beveridge-What It Was

The closing hours of the session of tack made by Senator Balley of Texas upon Senator Beveridge of Indiana. It was similar, in some respects, to the trouble which occurred in the same chamber on Washington's Birthday of the present year between Senators Till-man and McLaurin of South Carolina. According to the illumination of Mariborough House Mr. Spooner, Mr. Beveridge was not choked at all, and the Senator from Texas did not lay his hand upon him. There is a direct conflict of testimony therefore, as to whether any choking took place, but it is significant that all of the Senators present agree with the statement of Senator Spooner that no actual assault was made.
